Derby Winner Disqualified

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) —Dancer's Image, the sore-legged colt that finished first in the 94th Kentucky Derby last Saturday, was disqualified as the winner Tuesday because of the presence of a pain killer in his system.

Stewards at Churchill Downs, home of the Derby, said Calumet Farm's Forward Pass would be reognized as the winner and would be awarded the $122,600 prize, second richest in Derby history.

Francie's Hat was moved to second and T.V. Commercial was moved to third. Dancer's Image was placed last.

It was the first time any Kentucky Derby entry had ever been disqualified. Under Kentucky racing regulations, wa-

Bets Stand On 'Image'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—To the $2 bettor, the disqualification of Dancer's Image in the Kentucky Derby doesn't mean a thing.

Wathen Knebelkamp, president of Churchill Downs, pointed out in announcing the disqualification Tuesday that Rule 14.06 of the Rules of Racing provide that when drugs are found in a horse's urine sample "such horse shall not participate in the purse distribution, and under the rules of racing the wagering on said race is in no way affected."

That means: For bettors, the finish of the race was: 1. Dancer's Image; 2. Forward Pass; 3. Francie's Hat.

For purse distribution, it's: 1. Forward Pass; 2. Francie's Hat; 3. T.V. Commercial.

Mrs. Wallace Dies of Cancer; Brewer Is Alabama Governor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) —Gov. Lurleen Wallace, a former dime-store clerk who rode her husband's popularity into the Alabama governor's office as his successor, died Tuesday after a long fight against cancer.

The blonde, 41-year-old mother of four, Alabama's first woman governor, died in the governor's mansion at 1:34 a.m. EDT. Her husband, George Wallace, whom she succeeded as governor to further his third-party presidential aspirations, was at her side.

Her body lay in state for private viewing by officials at the mansion Tuesday from 2 until 6 p.m., and will lie in state at the capitol rotunda from Wednesday morning until the Thursday afternoon funeral. Lt. Gov. Albert Brewer, 39, was sworn in as governor. Before dawn porters began moving boxes of files and pictures out of Gov. Wallace's office at the capitol. Flags were raised to half staff at dawn and radio stations broadcast funeral arrangements of "Dixie."

Her body will be moved to the capitol in a funeral procession (Continued on Back Page, Col. 1)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., swept to solid victory in Tuesday's Indiana presidential preference primary that projected him to the top level of Democratic presidential nomination contenders.

In his first test at the polls since his entry into the race, Kennedy topped Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., the strong man of two previous primaries, and Gov. Roger D. Branigin, an uncommitted favorite son leaning toward Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

Alone on the Republican ballot, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon rolled up an impressive total likely to exceed the 408,000 he received in the state's 1960 primary, when he had only token opposition.

The count from 1,679 of the state's 4,461 precincts gave Kennedy 135,374, or 41 per cent of the total vote; McCarthy 100,073, or 30 per cent; Branigin 96,263, or 29 per cent.

Nixon's total from 1,677 precincts was 205,841.

Trapped Miners Get Air

HOMINY FALLS, W.Va. (AP) —Surface teams punched an air vent 140 feet through the roof of a mountain Tuesday to two of the 25 men trapped in a coal mine and brightened chances for their rescue. Another shaft was being drilled to 13 others but a shale layer prevented its progress.

The vent provides air for mine foreman Frank Davis and miner Edward Rudd, isolated since noon Monday about one mile from the mine's entrance. It also enables rescue teams to drop food and water.

Contact was maintained with all 15 but there still was no word from another 10 men trapped two miles from the entrance and hope for them was slight.

Thousands of gallons of water cascaded into the Gauley Coal and Coke Co. mine about noon Monday when a crew cutting coal broke through to a nearby abandoned mine which was flooded.

Reds Still Want Hue, Rosson Says

PHU BAI, Vietnam (AP) — North Vietnamese troops continue to threaten the city of Hue even though allied forces have captured huge supplies in the A Shau Valley and stand astride the main infiltration route to the city, Lt. Gen. William B. Rosson said Tuesday.

"There is no doubt the enemy's strength in the Hue area indicates his continuing interest," Rosson said. "He continues to pose a threat."

However, Rosson told a news conference, "We are prepared to meet this threat. We have been in continuous contact with enemy elements for six weeks."

Rosson, commander of Provisional Corps, Vietnam, is in charge of all U.S. forces in the area immediately south of the Demilitarized Zone.

The commander of the 101st Airborne Div., Maj. Gen. Orlino M. Barsanti, whose troops are operating between A Shau and Hue, said recently there are an estimated 20,000 North Vietnamese soldiers in the area of the old imperial capital.

Rosson said North Vietnamese resistance to allied penetration of the giant logistics base in the A Shau Valley "has been somewhat lighter than we expected."

The operation, dubbed Delaware-Lam Son 216, has been kept under tight security wraps.

Rosson stressed that the operation was "a high risk undertaking" and said the security precautions were an effort to hold back information from the Communist command and to protect allied lives.

U.S. losses in the operation, from April 19 through May 6, were 121 killed and 610 wounded, he said.

Casualties among the North Vietnamese for the same period were 654 killed, Rosson said.

He added that there has been sharper fighting between allied and North Vietnamese forces along Route 547, the major infiltration route from Laos to Hue, than in the valley itself.

"In the valley they seem content to harass us and to try to defend their cache areas," he said.

He described the contact as light and scattered and said the defenders were mostly engineers, supply and logistics elements, and light security forces.

"Along the road, though," Rosson said, "there has been some sharp fighting. We've run into some regular North Vietnamese infantry units there."

The U.S. forces in the valley are elements of the 1st Air Cav. Div. They are operating alongside South Vietnamese units. A task force of South Vietnamese paratroopers is working with the troops of the 101st Airborne Div. along Route 547.

Although he would not disclose exact troop locations, Rosson said that as of Monday, "a substantial portion of the valley has come under search." The troops moving along Route 547 have progressed to "several kilometers west of Delta Junction."

Delta Junction is the point where Routes 547 and 547A merge and continue on toward Hue. It is about 10 miles from A Shau Valley.

Rosson disclosed an extensive list of North Vietnamese weapons, ammunition and equipment captured in the continuing operation:

The list included 1,928 rifles, 4,000 pounds of explosives, a dozen 37mm automatic anti-aircraft guns, 46 trucks, including 15 of Russian make and one American vehicle, hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition of all types, as well as tons of communications and engineering equipment.

All this booty, Rosson said, justified Operation Delaware even if nothing more were to be accomplished.

He said an air strip has been established in the valley and that U.S. supply craft, including big C130s, were making regular runs in and out of A Shau.

Viet Police Colonel Slain

SAIGON (AP) — Col. Dam Van Quy, second in command of the South Vietnamese National Police, was killed early Tuesday by a sniper in the Cholon Chinese quarter of Saigon.

He was the second high-ranking officer to be killed in the last two days.

Col. Luu Kim Cuong, Vietnamese commander of the Tan Son Nhut Air Base, was killed Monday by a rocket outside the base perimeter.

Quy was special assistant to Brig. Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan, head of the South Vietnamese National Police. Loan himself was wounded in street fighting Sunday and is recovering in a hospital.

U.S. Ship Hit by N. Viets

SAIGON (UPI) — North Vietnamese shore gunners scored a direct hit on the U.S. destroyer Theodore E. Chandler and wounded one sailor, the Navy reported Tuesday.

The announcement said the destroyer was firing on Communist positions in North Vietnam's southern panhandle Monday when 87mm shore batteries opened up.

Sixty-five rounds splashed in around the ship, and one hit the bulkhead, leaving a four-inch hole above the main deck and wounding the sailor.

The Chandler was accompanied on the mission by the destroyer Turner Joy, which was involved in the incident in the Tonkin Gulf which led to escalation of the Vietnam war. The Turner Joy escaped unhit, the Navy said.

15,000 Leave Cholon

SAIGON (AP) — Refugees streamed out of the Cholon battle zone on the southern fringe of Saigon Tuesday. Vietnamese police estimated 15,000 had fled their homes shortly before nightfall.

This estimate was in addition to the 5,000 persons reported Monday to have been made homeless in the opening phases of the enemy weekend offensive in Saigon.

The brunt of the city fighting had shifted by Tuesday afternoon to an area generally along the south edge of the capital and it was from this region that the stream of men, women and children poured throughout the day. They loaded what personal possessions they could on bicycles, motorbikes and carts and pushed toward safer areas.

Vietnamese police and government troops helped to move some of the people while fire-fights flashed through nearby areas.

Fighting intensified in the southern area during the afternoon, and many flimsy, shanty-type homes were destroyed by fire.

Thai Leader Shuns Industry

NEW YORK (AP) — Prime Minister Thanom Kittikachorn of Thailand told a meeting of American and Thai business leaders Tuesday that Thailand has "no desire" to transform itself into an industrial nation.

Giving the major address at a three-day seminar of Thailand trade and development, he noted that his country had concentrated heavily on industry over the past five years.

Following Kittikachorn's talks, the U.S. ambassador in Thailand, Leonard Unger, introduced the national development and economic affairs minister, Pote Sarasin. Sarasin led a discussion on Thailand as the business key in Southeast Asia.

At a news conference afterward, Sarasin answered questions on internal development plans, on Japanese business activity in Thailand, on the Mekong River development project, and other matters.

Village Shows Courage

HUE, Vietnam (IO) — Some very brave Vietnamese in the small village of Sia north of here recently openly defied their Red oppressors and rallied in support of the South Vietnamese government.

More than 2,000 from seven neighboring hamlets of Quang Dien district marched into the village's public market carrying anti-Viet Cong banners and chanted protests of VC terrorism and murder.

A color guard of popular regional forces began the 45-minute ceremony by snapping to attention and presenting arms in honor of South Vietnamese soldiers who have died fighting the NVA and the Viet Cong insurgents.

Guest of honor was district chief, Capt. Dao, who received a thundering applause and shouts of "South Vietnamese Government Forever, Down With the Viet Cong!"

Following a talk by Dao, a Hoi Chanh — a Viet Cong who voluntarily turns himself in to the South Vietnamese government — told the villagers why he left the enemy forces.

"The Viet Cong wanted me to come back and kill my fellow villagers," he told them. "I managed to escape from them, for I could no longer put up with their terrorism. I now wish to join the South Vietnamese Army and fight our country's enemy — the Viet Cong."

Senior MACV advisor to the district chief, Capt. Gerald A. Hazelton, Ottawa, Ohio, and Capt. Szaboles DeGyurky, civil affairs officer for the 101st Airborne Div.'s 1st Bn., 501st Inf., were invited.

Former AF Chief Receives Award

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI)—Gen. Carl Spaatz, retired Air Force combat leader of World War II and former Air Force chief of staff, received the Air Force Academy's Thomas D. White National Defense Award.

Spaatz was appointed commanding general of the Army Air Forces in February, 1947 and was named chief of staff of the Air Force in September, 1947. He retired in 1948.

The award is named for the late Gen. White, who retired in 1961 as Air Force chief of staff.

'Perfect Navy Coordination'

Fliers Rescued in Mid-Ditching

WITH THE 7TH FLEET IN THE TONKIN GULF (PAO) — A rescue helicopter from a 7th Fleet guided missile frigate was airborne in three minutes after receiving a distress call from a Navy jet in a "classic rescue" of the plane's pilot and bombardier-navigator in the Gulf of Tonkin.

Lt. Cmdr. Duke Hernandez of San Diego, Calif., and Lt. (j.g.) D. J. Lortscher of Rhineland, Wis., were flying a Navy F4 phantom jet in a bombing mission over North Vietnam's southern Panhandle when their plane was hit by antiaircraft fire and burst into flames.

They turned seaward and prepared to ditch as they sent out a distress call to Navy ships operating in the area.

Radarman Glenn R. Newson of Chula Vista, Calif., picked up the "Mayday" signal aboard the frigate. As the helicopter took off from her deck three minutes later, the ship increased speed and changed course in the direction of the falling aircraft.

Planes from 7th Fleet aircraft carriers circled the area to mark the spot for the rescue team.

The helicopter, piloted by Lt. (j.g.) Skip Yates and copiloted by Lt. (j.g.) Lennie Devries, skimmed over wave tops at maximum speed. When it neared the downed pilots, Yates radioed, "Both men are okay and in their life rafts."

They were hoisted into the hovering helicopter and taken to the frigate where a Navy doctor said, "Both men are in good shape, considering their exposure."

"The helo was on the scene before I had time to complete my 'ditch' routine," Hernandez said. "It was terrific."

The entire rescue operation took less than 30 minutes.

A Navy A7A Corsair rests in the soft sand at the end of the Quang Tri runway after the pilot had to make an emergency landing when he lost oil pressure while on a mission. (USMC)

Stricken Carrier Jet Finds A Soft Landing at Quang Tri

DA NANG, Vietnam (ISO) — The helicopter mechanics and crews watched curiously as the sleek Navy A-7A Corsair II jet approached Quang Tri air strip for a landing.

Quang Tri is a 3,800-foot aluminum strip utilized only by helicopters and assault transports. This would be the first jet to try a landing at Quang Tri.

The unexpected visitor was Navy Cmdr. J.C. Hill, 37, of Lemoore, Calif., the commander of Attack Sq. 147, stationed aboard the aircraft carrier Ranger off Vietnam.

The Navy jet had attacked targets in the northern sector of the I Corps tactical zone northeast of Quang Tri when the pilot discovered he had lost engine oil pressure. An immediate landing was the only alternative to certain engine failure, which would mean ejection and the loss of the multi-million dollar aircraft.

Spotting Quang Tri, Hill knew it wasn't a jet airfield, and that it was too short to properly accommodate the A-7. But he had no alternative but a landing if he was to save the aircraft. The right main landing gear tire blew at touchdown, but he kept the aircraft going straight down the narrow strip, with the Marine crash crew in hot pursuit.

The Corsair II went off the end of the runway through a couple of hundred feet of soft sand. But the damage was minor, and with an engine change the plane will be flown back to the carrier.

However, the Marine helicopter crews had a major problem on their hands, trying to get the 20,000-plus pound jet out of the soft sand and back on the runway.

Ankle Sprain Lucky Turn

TAY NINH, Vietnam (IO) — Pfc. Kevin Sullivan fell and sprained his ankle on patrol the other day.

He was lucky. Spec. 4 Tom McDermott, a squad leader with Sullivan's outfit, the 4th Bn. of the 25th Inf. Div.'s 9th Inf., tells the story of his buddy's painful good fortune. It happened about three miles west of Trang Bang:

"Four of us were going to check out a hedgerow about 75 meters to the front of my platoon.

"I looked back and I saw Sullivan was behind, so I waited for him. The other two men went on. When Sullivan was parallel to me, we moved on.

"We were in front of an opening in the hedgerow. A Viet Cong opened up on the two of us with an AK50, firing all tracer rounds.

"Both of us hit the dirt. Then Sullivan crouched low and started to run for cover. He tripped and fell to the sounds of a second enemy burst. I saw the bullets miss his head by inches as he went down."

McDermott and Sullivan crawled to safety as the other two men ahead of them, raked the VC position with bullets.

"If I hadn't fallen and sprained my ankle those bullets would have hit me right in the head," Sullivan chimed in.

Cushman, Statistics Refute Corps Critics

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — The Marine effort in Vietnam has been under fire — not only from the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese — but also verbal fire from critics.

Some say the marines were ill-fitted for fighting in the streets of Hue or the fortress at Khe Sanh. They say marines should be fighting in the soggy Mekong Delta, rather than the hills near the Demilitarized Zone.

But the Marine commander in Vietnam, Lt. Gen. Robert Cushman, answers these comments with an emphatic "no."

He said that although his unit is primarily an amphibious force, the Marines are fully trained and prepared for ground warfare.

In fact, Cushman said, they fight out of the same book as the Army when it comes to land warfare. They differ only when it comes to the Marines' primary mission, the amphibious operation.

"At Khe Sanh," said the general, "we started out with a small force and used the area as a base for mobile operations. Later, when the pressure built, there was no opportunity for a Maginot Line-type of defense to be built." The Maginot Line was a French system of elaborate bunkers.

But he denied his men were not well dug-in at Khe Sanh.

"It is our basic doctrine that when you stop moving, you dig in. And the longer you stay put," he said, "the deeper you dig."

Cushman said he issued three orders to the 5,000 men guarding the embattled outpost at Khe Sanh: "Dig faster, deeper and better."

Proof, he said, that the Marines did dig in at Khe Sanh lies in the casualty figures. Two hundred and four marines were killed during the 77-day siege; 845 were wounded seriously enough to be evacuated, and 777 suffered minor wounds. North Vietnamese confirmed killed around Khe Sanh topped 1,500.

As for the charge the Marines weren't prepared for the street fighting at Hue, Cushman says the facts show otherwise. Cushman said he was at Camp Pendleton, Calif., in charge of training troops for Vietnam. And he contends they go through simulated city combat among other preparations for battle.

In fact, he said, they were so well trained that they were able to clear the Reds out of a hospital during the fight for the citadel without harming any of the patients.

And for the charge the marines would be better off in the delta, which is laced with rivers, Cushman said that is a misconception. He said the delta fighting is not an amphibious operation. It is nothing but a great big swamp. "Riverine warfare," he called it.

He said a new kind of warfare had to be invented, with the Marines no more qualified by previous training than the Army and Navy units now doing the job.

Reds Hit Saigon Police Stations, Shell Downtown

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces attacked three police stations in Saigon and shelled the center of the city early Wednesday. Allies killed 213 Viet Cong in street fighting.

The Communists distributed pamphlets and broadcast appeals over clandestine radio urging a general uprising and boasting they would keep the city in turmoil during the Paris peace talks.

The shelling did little damage to the city but added to growing apprehension among its two million residents. One rocket landed little more than half-a-mile from Independence Palace.

Tan Son Nhut, the allied air base on Saigon's northwestern edge, also was hit. At least 14 rockets slammed into it and another exploded in a heavily populated residential section nearby.

Heavy fighting was under way Wednesday on the southern and western edges of the city. Allied patrols sweeping Communist sanctuaries and staging areas further out from the city uncovered 89 more bodies killed in earlier air strikes and fighting about 22 miles northwest of Saigon along the route the Communists use to enter the city.

The new flurry of battling sent Communist casualties to more than 2,000 since they launched the offensive Sunday. Most have been in the Saigon area.

It also caused thousands of refugees to pour into the city centers. Government refugee centers, already jammed with 100,000 homeless from the Tet offensive, filled to overflowing.

A 24-hour curfew was ordered for most of Cholon, the Chinese district where the fighting was heaviest, and the rest of the city was under tight dusk-to-dawn curfew.

The heaviest fighting was in the Eighth District along the southern edges of town near the Tau Ho and Doi Canals. It started Tuesday and was still under way Wednesday with allied warplanes bombing and strafing in the area, two miles from Saigon's Independence Palace.

U.S. military spokesmen said elements of the American 9th Inf. Div. intercepted the Communists' elite Phu Loi Bn. trying to enter the city.

They trapped them in a factory and residential area and killed 213 Tuesday, the spokesmen said.

In progress in the District of Columbia, Alabama, Florida and Ohio.

McCarthy said the count was not distressing to him, adding, "I think we're doing all right." He said he intends to go on to other primaries. The next test between him and Kennedy will come in the May 14 Nebraska primary.

A spokesman for Kennedy said the New York senator "appears to be headed for an impressive victory in Indiana, defeating an entrenched Democratic machine and reversing in four weeks the predictions that he would lose here."

There was no clear indication of the extent of any Republican cross-over into the Democratic primary. But it seemed likely that cross-over votes were being divided by McCarthy and the governor, with few of them going to Kennedy.

Despite this, Nixon seemed likely to substantially top his 1960 Indiana primary total.

Kennedy's supporters said their spot checks indicated the New York senator ran strongly in Negro districts in Indianapolis and Fort Wayne, slightly in front in similar areas in Evansville on the southern border of the state and well ahead among Polish voters in South Bend.

McCarthy led Kennedy widely in the area around Purdue University at Lafayette and among upper-middle class white voters in Evansville.

The Minnesota senator also led in the Indiana University area at Bloomington, but Kennedy was ahead in South Bend, home of the University of Notre Dame.

McCarthy forged to a surprising lead in Lake County precincts, both in the industrial strip east of Chicago and in southern rural areas of the county.

Derby Winner Disqualified

gearing on the Derby is not affected.

A chemist for the Kentucky State Racing Commission said phenylbutazone, an analgesic, showed up in a routine urinalysis taken after the race.

"I'm tremendously shocked and grieved. What else can I say?" said Peter Fuller, the Boston automobile dealer who owns Dancer's Image.

Fuller said trainer Lou Cavalariis Jr. had told him Monday night that something was wrong with the urinalysis. Cavalariis was at the stewards' hearing Tuesday.

Downs President Wathen Knebelkamp told Fuller about the disqualification by telephone after Fuller called him during a news conference.

As usual after a Derby, the winner and one other horse chosen by lot are tested. The test of the other horse, Kentucky Sherry, showed negative results, Knebelkamp said.

Fuller said he isn't sure now whether Dancer's Image will go in the Preakness at Pimlico, the second jewel in racing's Triple Crown, which is to be raced May 18.

Knebelkamp said there was nothing unusual about the delay in making the announcement. The Derby was the seventh race last Saturday and the results of the test did not become available to the track until Monday afternoon.

A Lexington, Ky., veterinarian who deals exclusively with horses said: "This particular drug does not affect a horse's performance other than to make him perhaps a little sounder. It is an anti-inflammation drug and not anything like heroin or something like that."

Knebelkamp said phenylbutazone had been outlawed at practically all race tracks, although it was legal at Churchill Downs until a few years ago.

"I have no idea who the guilty party is," Knebelkamp said. "Those connected with the horse will be given a hearing before the commissioners later this week."

3rd Heart Transplant In 5 Days in Houston

HOUSTON (UPI)—A surgical team led by Dr. Denton A. Cooley Tuesday performed the world's 12th heart transplant and the third in Houston in five days.

A St. Luke's Hospital spokesman said the heart of the 22-year-old victim of a beating was transferred to the body of a 62-year-old hospital administrator in a 2½-hour operation which ended shortly before 4:30 p.m.

Houston's two previous heart transplant recipients were reported in "satisfactory" condition.

A spokesman said the operation began about an hour and a half after the donor, Clarence Nicks, of Houston, died at the hospital.

The recipient was John M. Stuckwisch, administrator of Brester Memorial Hospital in Alpine, Tex.

Alabama's Gov. Lurleen Wallace Dies

Wednesday morning.

It was to be removed Thursday afternoon for 2 p.m. services at St. James Methodist Church, with burial at Greenwood Cemetery in Montgomery.

Brewer, a dapper North Alabama attorney and close personal friend of the Wallaces, said "the people of America have suffered a great loss" with the death of Gov. Wallace.

Mrs. Wallace died on the day of the Alabama Democratic primary, when voters were to nominate candidates for U. S.

Senate and a slate of electors pledged to George Wallace, a third party presidential candidate. Brewer was on the Wallace slate, which was almost certain of victory. The next governor's election is in two years.

Wallace had to postpone his campaign for president at times because of his wife's illness, but he was not expected to drop out of the race. He once said he had pledged to his wife to seek the presidency despite any adversity.

Mrs. Wallace first contracted cancer in 1965, before she campaigned for governor because her husband was prohibited by the Alabama Constitution from succeeding himself. But she said an operation apparently had cleared up the uterine cancer.

Mrs. Wallace, inaugurated Jan. 16, 1967 on the capitol steps where Jefferson Davis was sworn in as president of the Confederacy, had been in office less than six months when she received the news she had cancer for the second time.

While she had maintained a busy schedule of appointments and sometimes had two or three speaking engagements a day during her first half year, she was seldom in the office after the cancer recurred.

Mrs. Wallace, a 17-year-old dimestore clerk in Tuscaloosa when she married Wallace during World War II, was elected to succeed her husband as governor with the largest vote ever given a gubernatorial candidate in Alabama.

Mrs. Wallace was born Sept. 19, 1926, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Burns. She grew up in Tuscaloosa, graduating from high school at the age of 15, then went on to Tuscaloosa Business College.

She had planned to take nurse's training when she became 18, but at 17 she met and married Wallace, who had graduated from the University of Alabama law school.
